On the Berliner Quakeforen, I hang out in the english DD-WRT and WRT54G forums.

I used to go by BobPaul, short for Bob/Paul, short for ~Bob/Paul~: a nickname I coined in highschool, but then James Erving of Sveasoft started banning people from the Sveasoft forums for having an account at bsr-clan.de with the same name. I created a new account and named it Sveasoft.

Now that I finally bought a WRT54G router, I'm much more active in both the forums and the Wiki creation.

I'm a student of electrical engineering in the states. I've taken the Cisco Networking classes, but decided against paying $100 for a certification test when the certification would expire long before I graduated from school.

I know a thing or two about a thing or two.
